The Spoken Aramaic of Maaloula the Language of Christ the Lord Dr. Issam Hanna Francis

Maaloula, Syria - In this quaint stone village perched high in the mountains above Damascus, the language of Christ has somehow, miraculously, endured through the millennia. Aramaic, which was dominant in the region when Jesus was alive, died out elsewhere many centuries ago. But in Maaloula, time and geography have conspired to keep it alive, and today this village is the last place on Earth in which the language spoken by Jesus is still the native tongue. I tried to publish this book to help people learn Aramaic the way the residents of Maaloula speak it. After this book, we can proudly say that our dialect is not only spoken but written as well
